Current Responsibility

Adam is a claims consultant in Milliman's Boston office. He joined the firm in 2003.

Professional Work Experience

Since joining Milliman, Adam has evaluated claims handling best practices and procedures through all areas of the claim life cycle, including intake, investigation, reserving, medical management, return to work, vendor management, litigation management, and resolution strategies. Adam has expertise in managing and evaluating WC claim practices in virtually all jurisdictions. He has substantial experience in the valuation and management of individual large and long-term "tail" claims, including the medical component of such claims and in claim handling practices of high-cost and catastrophic claims. Adam's clients include insurers, self-insured employers and self-insurance groups, municipalities, reinsurers, captives, risk retention groups, and third-party administrators.

Adam also has experience in property and casualty actuarial work, including loss reserving, ratemaking, and data analysis. He has worked with clients that include multiline property and casualty insurers, captives, self-insurers, and risk retention groups.
